

Expectation: information is hold in some register before it is sent to CPU. Storing information may require the voltage to hold for the storing period. A decrease in the length of this time may decrease the power consumption.